Module paper

1. Define the next notions coming up with your own explanations:

to contextualize, transnational culture, global identities, a discursive aspect, to transcend, specific, a head line.

2. Render this text into Ukrainian, then ask 5 special questions on the main contest of the text.

Since the conception of global journalism is still fairly new, exact and direct examples are hard to come by. Thus, the criteria of being considered as an example is to see which news media outlets and organizations consider the "global outlook"<sup>[1]</sup> to some extent. In other words, since there are no established news media that solely report global journalism, there is an extent to what can be considered a direct example of global journalism. However, having noted that, the following news media outlets and organizations can be considered initial examples of global journalism.

- CNN International (CNNI)- deliver a global outlook on financial reporting
- BBC World- deliver a global outlook on financial reporting
- Reuters- deliver a global outlook on financial reporting
- Le Monde- although this is a national newspaper, it is found to deliver heavily on a global outlook
- BBC's World Service Television (BBC-WS-TV)- delivers programmes worldwide
- Al Jazeera- transnational news channel for the Arab community
- ZEE TV- transnational channel targeting the Indian community worldwide

3. Correct the mistakes. Rewrite the text.

Sawyer is an American journalist who is the first female 60 Minutes correspondent and most recently anchored for ABC World News until September 2014. She currently does high-profile interviews and specials for ABC News. Beginning her career off the local news station and then the White House press office in 1970 for a time where there was very few female journalists, she was consider a great pioneer for the woman who followed in her footsteps. During her long-standing career, Sawyer has co-anchored Primetime Live, 20/20 as well as ABC's morning show Good Morning America, which she hold for much longer than anticipated due to her popularity in the position; one she also received an Emmy Award for in 2000. She also won an Emmy in 2007 for her reporting on ABC World News, along with numerous others like the Peabody Award and the Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award during her time on the show. Sawyer has also frequented the annual Forbes Magazine's List of The World's 100 Most Powerful Women since 2004.
