Some words and phrases in a code of ethics are subject to varying interpretations, and any ethical principle may conflict with other ethical principles in specific situations. The entire IEEE (The Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers) expects our members to behave professionally and ethically at all times. In fact, I suspect that it is generally taken for granted that people are aware of and understand which behaviors are ethical and which are not. But then, we have a membership made up of people from many different countries around the world, often with radically different cultures and ways of operating. How could we all have the same set of ethical standards? Can we all be expected to understand and subscribe to the same ethics? In order to ensure that everyone has the same understanding, IEEE does have a code of ethics. And we expect that all our members and volunteers also subscribe as a condition of membership. At the same time, what we see as ethical behavior can differ slightly from person to person, in the sense of the sensitivity of single individuals to the issue at stake. What a group considers ethical also changes over time.
