

Michał Organ (ed.)

Translation Today/ National Identity in Focus

The book aims to present a comprehensive picture of contemporary and diverse topics in the field of translation studies, and provide the reader with issues correlated with the notion and elements of national identity and translation. The collection of seventeen selected chapters is written by researchers, scholars, academics, professional translators and other practitioners in the field who direct their attention and present research and present and future research areas and scientific interests.

The Editor

Michał Organ, PhD, is an assistant professor at the Department of English Theory in the Institute of English Studies, University of Wrocław, Poland. His main research interests include authorial translation, literary translation, censorship and manipulation in translation, machine translation, translation of tourist information texts and CAT (computer Assisted Translation) tools.

Translation Today: National Identity in Focus    Michał Organ (ed.)

Michał Organ (ed.)

Translation Today: National Identity in Focus

